A DELIGHTFUL MUSICALE,

The musicale at the residence of Mrs. Rosabelle Frushour-Lines, 514 Elm street, by her pupils was a most successful affair. Miss Mabel Sherman ably assisted with her recitations which were heartly received. There were present about seventy-five of the friends of the pupils. All the scholars reflected great credit on their teachers in the pleasant manner the selections

A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

Already Assured for the Foot Guards' Coming Grand Entertalnment.

The Foot Guards are aiming at perfection in broducing their tableaux at the Hyperion. The rehearsals are progressing with great promptitude and much enthusiasm nightly.

The Napoleonic craze, which is an importation, has been superseded by a Washington craze, and in this city the mania has reached an acute stage.

The town bred and born of '76 take great pride in the fact that they alone took up the gauntlet for our independence, and to be a descendant of a Revolutionary family implies a very great distinction indeed.

> An Interesting Lecture by Mr. Fenolossa of the Boston Art School-Periods of Japanese Art-Comparison With European Art-Fine Views of Best Japanese Pic tures-Large Audlence - Prizes Au nounced.

The commencement exercises of the Yale art school concluded last evening by a most entertaining lecture given at the art school building by Ernest F. Fenoliosa of the Boston Art school on "Japanese Art." Prof. Welr of the art school made a few preliminary remarks and President Dwight introduced the speaker, saying that he congratulated the professors of the school on what they have done, and he was sure that the school is just in the beginning of venue schoolhouse have arrived and Its success, and it will be more and more appreciated in the future. Mr. Fenollosa from his long residence in Japan speaks from the standpoint of one who knows the subject thoroughly, He said that to get a comprehensive idea of the subject one must study the eras of Japanese art down through fourteen centuries. There are many misconceptions in regard to the matter, the chief one being that the art of Japan is simply decorative, that is. that no modelling is used. But whether it is decorative or not, it is expressive, Another misconception is that it s pictoral, and thus different from our own, but if we look back through the development of European art we see that its most important qualities are very similar to those of Japanese art. In the art of the Flowery kingdom five distinct periods can be distinguihed, each as different from the other as the periods of European art. The first period covers from the first to th eventh centuries of our era. The sec and period is the religious period, and the works of the period are in colors representing religious subjects, principally for the decoration of temples. The third period deals not with religion but with historical subjects and portrays motion. The fourth period is the idealization of nature, infused with all Gaining Opportunity. the idealism of man. The only equal of this period in our own civilization is the age of Pericles in Athens. The fifth period is the last, and is characteristic of more modern ideas. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon views, and some of the pictures shown were truly marvels of art, and are such as would surprise one who did not realize the true art of Japanese works. Some of the pictures were fine landscapes, the equals of which cannot be found in nany more famous European works. At the conclusion of the lecture the audience, which was large and composed of art lovers, was invited to look ver the collection of Japanese prints, which has been arranged and will remain on exhibition until after the academic commencement. The prints are loaned by Messrs, Howard Mansfield, J. Alden Weir, Addison Van Name, E. W. Williams, O. O. Marsh and
